

Reflection upon my Vocation

Attentively reflecting on my vocation, I would like to be a good shepherd and become the light and salt of the world. Thus, the authority is entrusted by God to me with a command and mission that is attached with the reasons. To follow up, the mission that entrusted to me, I should have zeal of discipleship. Though his disciples encountered downfalls, shortcomings, trials and difficulties on their way, Jesus is always near to uphold them. In fact, He has promised during the time of giving them the commission, "I am with you always to the end of this world" (Mt 28:20). Such assurance is prominent and fascinates me as I am called to be his servant.

Obviously, Jesus is safeguarding his disciples, and it also applies to me, since I was called to be his servant. In this case, the command and the mission should be completed by me. In order for me to accomplish the mission, there are some factors which I could ponder about it especially, the situation, geography, environment etc. Then the preaching can be absorbed by the flock very well.

Billy Bruno